Fast Facts: Naloxone Community Health Worker/Representative Program

What is Opioid Use Disorder and Naloxone?

Opioid Use Disorder is a medical condition that may cause an individual to be at risk for a possibly fatal overdose. Naloxone is a life-saving Opioid overdose reversal drug that can be used by anyone. Save a live. Carry Naloxone.

The Arizona Center for Rural Health (AzCRH), in collaboration with the Arizona Department of Health Services, Sonoran Prevention Works, and the Arizona Community Health Workers Association, identified and executed strategies to integrate care and prevent opioid-related deaths by building the capacity of Community Health Workers and Representatives (CHW/Rs)¹.

Naloxone Community Health Worker Program Activities

The AzCRH Naloxone CHW/R Team:

- Created and presented the Overdose Recognition and Naloxone training for Community Health Workers and Representatives (English & Spanish) and
- Connected CHW/Rs with their local Emergency Medical Services teams.

With additional funding from the CDC Data to Action grant, the AzCRH Naloxone CHW/R Team will:

- Host naloxone trainings for AZ Community Health Workers and Representatives
- Encourage collaborations between EMS organizations and their local CHW/Rs and Peer Support Specialists
- Create and update a website with training materials, resources, and training requests
