One course. One life changing opportunity.

Five community-engaged courses that integrate meaningful learning and reflective practice to help you develop skills needed to be effective working with communities and ultimately achieve social change.

HPS 597A – Family and Child Health in Urban Settings Service-Learning Institute
- Community: Tucson and Nogales
- Field Dates: First half of Spring semester
- Instructors: Jennifer Peters
- Explore current health and social policy and programs affecting families and children as you are immersed in the diverse organizations and communities that reflect the US-Mexico borderlands.

HPS 597B – Maternal and Child Health in Rural Settings Service-Learning Institute
- Community: Hopi and Navajo Nations
- Field Dates: Summer session I
- Instructor: Agnes Attakai
- Northern Arizona is diverse and expansive. Interact with tribal and rural health systems that serve children and families, with a focus on intergenerational connections and healthy aging.

PHP 597C – Border Health Service-Learning Institute
- Community: Yuma, Arizona – San Luis Rio Colorado, Sonora, Mx.
- Field Dates: Spring semester
- Instructors: Kate Ellingson
- Grab your passport and prepare for a binational, bicultural experience. Explore the role of public health advocacy in globalization, migration and health.

PHPM 497/597D – Rural Health Service-Learning Institute
- Community: Safford, Arizona
- Field Dates: Second half of Spring semester
- Instructors: Marc Verhøgstraete
- Explore environmental health and health promotion in Eastern Arizona rural communities through this immersion with community organizations serving the needs of this historical mining and cotton region.

HPS 597F – Phoenix Urban Service Learning
- Community: Central Phoenix, Arizona
- Field dates: Winter break
- Instructors: Janet Foote
- Learn about underserved communities and needs within a large urban center. Explore public health policy and action; interact with state and community-based programs meeting the needs of this diverse metropolitan city.