Measuring pollutants that are contaminating indigenous communities.

People living in villages far from the beaten path are experiencing adverse health effects from environmental pollution.

May 13, 2022 | Interview by Leslie Tolbert PhD with Frank von Hippel, PhD
https://radio.azpm.org/arizonascience/

People living in villages far from the beaten path are experiencing adverse health effects from environmental pollution. University of Arizona health sciences researcher Frank von Hippel talks about tracking down sources of contamination causing higher rates of cancer in tribal areas.

Frank von Hippel spoke with Leslie Tolbert, Ph. D. Regents professor emerita in Neuroscience at the University of Arizona.